Recently, I had the amazing chance to attend a conference in Georgia where ECAC partnered with Tennessee’s Parent Center in sharing our combined successes and challenges serving youth with disabilities in our state. In addition to presenting, I also was able to attend sessions as a listener. One of these sessions focused on the importance of having a life outside of advocacy, specifically taking time out of the day to do fun activities not related to advocacy. With much of the audience being parents and professionals, I pointed out my unique perspective as a self-advocate who feels a need to advocate every day in every aspect of life in order to find true happiness. However, I left this discussion thinking deeper about ways that I could show the world my identity beyond a self-advocate and celebrate more of what life has to offer.

To be clear, I love being an advocate for myself and others. It will always be a part of who I am and what I stand for. However, there is so much more to me than advocacy and I want the world to see more of that.

I believe many people with disabilities understand this feeling but sometimes we are constantly on guard in a world where true belonging can be hard to find. For this reason, I want to begin a new series with tips that can help us see our full identity and find moments to simply enjoy life. Instead of just focusing on self-care tips, I want to focus on ways we can advocate with purpose. While we are unique, we are no different in our shared experience of the ups and downs life has to offer. I hope you will join me in this journey as we embrace our true selves together.

APRIL IS AUTISM AWARENESS & ACCEPTANCE MONTH!

A Word from the Experts...

by Jaxson E., ECAC Junior Youth Advisory Team Member

Hi, my name is Jaxson. I love animals. I am on a swim team and a tennis team. I’m going to be a vet when I grow up. And, I have Autism. What that means for me is that my brain processes information differently than most people. I sometimes need to move a lot because my body has a hard time sitting still. It can be hard to focus and block out noises so I get distracted sometimes. I can also become super focused on a special interest or something I enjoy, and I may have trouble shifting attention to what I need to focus on. I have trouble talking to others and sometimes I don’t always know how to respond when someone talks to me. Sometimes I don’t like to be around food or smells Sometimes I flap my hands and jump (especially when I’m excited). Sometimes I get overwhelmed or my brain gets stuck on something and it’s hard to move on. We are all different in many ways and just because I have Autism doesn’t mean that I’m not just like you. I am kind, I am a good friend, I am smart and I have a great sense of humor.

Autism makes me unique, but I can still do anything that I want to do.

by Khloe S., ECAC Junior Youth Advisory Team Member

When I was just a little girl, I received the diagnosis of Autism. I was non-verbal until I was five. I have found my voice through riding horses and competing in rodeo. Throughout life, I have faced many obstacles. Over the past couple of years, I have begun advocating for others and myself. My goal is to share my story empower others to be the best version of them self. Do not let a diagnosis determine where you will end up!

"This world needs YOU!"

by Zay HB., ECAC Junior Youth Advisory Team Member

Hi! My name is Zay. I am in the sixth grade. It is hard for me to be in school because I have dyslexia. That means I have a hard time reading and writing but it does NOT mean I can’t learn. Other interesting facts about me include: I am a great gymnast, and I’m very good at soccer and I’m looking forward to learning mountain climbing this summer.

I am participating in ECAC’s Junior Youth Advisory Team because I want to help other kids with learning challenges. I want to learn to advocate better for myself and help other kids advocate as well. Having disabilities like mine, dyslexia, doesn't stop me from being able to do whatever I want to do. If I put my mind to it I can do it and that's something I want everyone else to know they can do too!

Whoever you are reading this article (and just to put it out into the world) I want everyone to know you can do anything! I want to remind you no matter hard it is you can try and you can do it. I need you guys to know just because you have a disability doesn’t mean you’re lazy or “not smart.” All it means is you’re different and that’s not necessarily a bad thing. Being different is what makes you stronger so make your difference a part of who you are and be proud of yourself! This world needs YOU!

North Carolina's Got Talent!

YEP’s NCGT column is here to put a spotlight on the many talents and abilities of N.C. Youth & Young Adults with Disabilities ages 5 to 26. The format of submissions can be a poem, artwork, blog, video, song, essay, article, presentation, an "About me" article, you name it. ECAC's Youth Advisory Team then reviews the submissions and chooses which ones to feature.

Turning 18: What Happens Now?

A FREE Webinar for North Carolina Youth with Disabilities

Monday, May 15th 6:30pm - 8:30pm

Turning 18 is a big deal! It is when you are considered an adult. For some of you, this feeling may be very exciting and long overdue. For some of you, it may feel scary and seem like a world of the unknown. And some may not have any feelings about it at all.

In this zoom training, we are going to talk about some things you need to know and prepare for when it comes to Turning 18. You may ask "Why are we talking about these things?". Well, these things are important when it comes to self-advocacy. We want you to know what to expect and your rights when you turn 18 years old.

This format for this event is a Zoom Meeting. Attendees are asked to have their cameras on and microphones muted during this presentation, except for when called on.

Youth can be accompanied by their parent or caregiver.

Do You Have a Plan for After High School?

ECAC in partnership with Disability: IN North Carolina is pleased to offer the STAR program. The STAR program offers Pre-Employment Transition Services* training including:

1. Job and career exploration
2. Self-advocacy training
3. Work readiness training.

The STAR classes are provided during the school day, as an... after-school program, and as a summer program offered virtually.

The STAR Program is open to high school students (ages 14 - 22) from all N.C. counties. Students with disabilities enrolled in the Future-Ready Course of Study (FRC), Occupational Course of Study (OCS), Extended Content Standards (ECS) or have a 504 plan are eligible. The STAR program serves students who attend public schools, charter schools, private schools, and home schools.

YOUTH LEADERSHIP FORUM!

Youth Leadership Forum is an event for youth and young adults with disabilities between the ages 15 and 30. This event is to support them with transition skills whether it is going from high school to college, college to work, moving out of parents’ home to living independently, etc. This 4-day opportunity encourages youth and young adults with disabilities to practice advocacy in their lives, whether individually or in the community. NCYFL builds young leaders while enabling them to experience independence and find their voice as advocates through fun and engaging activities. This life-changing program is FREE to all participants and provides all requested accommodations.

The 2023 NCYLF will be held July 16th-19th, 2023 at North Carolina State University. Delegates will get a taste of college life by staying in the dorms, eating in the dining halls, learning in the meeting rooms, and hanging out in dorm lounges. We cover all costs of the forum, including meals, lodging, and meeting materials. You will need to bring your awesome self, linens, clothes, medicine, durable medical equipment, hygiene products, and any other items that are necessary.

Application due April 25th, delegates will be selected and notified by May 15th.

The U.S. Department of Education, Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) is excited to announce an upcoming kickoff event for the transition initiative, Expect, Engage, Empower: Successful Transitions for All.

About the Event
Improving how we address transition services for youth with disabilities and their families is a critical need that will only be improved through prioritized and collaborative efforts. As young adults prepare to move from school to postsecondary education, community living, and competitive integrated employment, effective transition planning can help them become independent, productive adults. The Expect, Engage, Empower initiative is an opportunity to bring together various stakeholders to explore potential strategies and innovative approaches to address transition for children and youth with disabilities.

June 26th - 27th, 2023
We welcome:
- Individuals with disabilities and their families
- Community members
- Researchers
- Graduate students
- Advocates
- Administrators
- Community-based service providers
- Employers
- and all others who participate in inclusive practices across the lifespan

7th Annual Inclusion Summit
The Annual Inclusion Summit brings various disability inclusion stakeholders together to discuss current practices and future innovations. Thus, we invite participants and presenters from among educators, school administrators, related service providers, individuals with disabilities and their families, employers of individuals with disabilities, community-based service providers, vocational support service providers, researchers, policymakers, and all others who participate in inclusive practices across the lifespan.

There will be something for everyone!
This year's summit promises to be an exciting and informative experience, featuring relevant and motivating speakers, breakout sessions, and networking opportunities.

By attending this event, you will have the chance to connect with fellow educators, parents, and community members who share your passion for creating inclusive environments that foster learning and growth for all individuals.

New Updated Tip Sheet for Young Adults from Transitions ACR:

My "Must Have" Papers
Managing the Paperwork of Adulting

Becoming a young adult means a lot of paperwork! Real IDs, Social Security cards, passports, medical records, employment records and more. It can be overwhelming. How do you know the most important documents to hold onto, and those you can toss out? Or which documents to carry with you at all times and which to keep safely at home? This new 4 page, well organized tip sheet can help you answer those questions, and others. The goal is to make the transition to adulthood just a little bit easier - for all people involved, both the young adults and their supporters.

Turning 18 in North Carolina What Individuals with Disabilities Need to Consider

Turning 18 is a big deal for all individuals. An 18-year-old is legally considered an adult in North Carolina. Therefore, when a child turns 18, they are the person that makes legal, financial, medical, and educational decisions in their life. For some individuals with disabilities, this will not be an issue. Others may need support.

This Fact Sheet provides important information on things that you should consider as you or your loved one turns 18.
